Location

Newbiggin-by-the-Sea a small town in Northumberland, lying on the North Sea coast. Once an important port for shipping grain and a coal mining town, it is still a small fishing port making use of traditional coble boats. It is a popular coastal town and has a steady stream of tourism throughout the year.

Description

The Old Ship is a traditional bar which serves food within the thriving tourist village of Newbiggin-by-the-Sea. There are 5 spacious en-suite guest rooms currently in use with an additional 5 guest rooms that require renovations.

The bar area is well-presented with fully equipped commercial kitchen. There is also a large outdoor decking area leading onto the promenade, where guests can enjoy food and drink outside with views of the bay.

There is huge scope to increase the current turnover by opening the front bar area and function room both currently not in use.

Accounts

We have verbally been informed the current turnover is circa £200,000 per annum.
